New School Website

We are delighted to announce that in the coming weeks the school will launch a new school website which will address some of the concerns raised in the last parents survey about the current website. In the last survey only 65% of parents thought that the website communicated up to date information, compared to 97% who thought that Twitter and ParentMail did. To help address this concern the PTFA have agreed to fund the new school website providing up to date information for parents, a link to the Twitter accounts, a learning zone for pupils and a pupil blog so that all of our school community can find out exactly what is happening in school. More information to follow in the coming weeks.
